LOGLINE

THE AGE OF LOVE follows the playful and poignant adventures of thirty seniors who attend a first-of-its-kind Speed Dating event for 70- to 90-year-olds, and discover how the search for love changes – or doesn't change – from first love to the far reaches of life.

SHORT SYNOPSIS

An unprecedented speed dating event for 70- to 90-year-olds serves as the backdrop for THE AGE OF LOVE, an alternately poignant and spirited look at the search for love among the senior set.

Over one summer, we intimately follow as ten speed daters – recently widowed, long-divorced or never-married – prepare for the big day, endure a rush of encounters, then anxiously receive their results. Fearlessly candid about themselves and what they're seeking, these WWII babies are spurred to take stock of life-worn bodies yet still-hopeful hearts.

Then, as they head out on dates that result, humorous and bittersweet moments reveal how worries over physical appearance, romance and rejection, loss and new beginnings change – or don't change – from first love to the far reaches of life.

The Age of Love is a story of the universality of love and desire, regardless of age.

FULL SYNOPSIS

THE AGE OF LOVE follows the playful and poignant adventures of thirty seniors in Rochester, NY who sign up for a first-of-its-kind speed dating event exclusively for 70- to 90-year-olds. From anxious anticipation through the dates that follow, it's an unexpected tale of intrepid seniors who lay their hearts on the line and discover how emotional needs and desires change – or don't change – from first love to the far reaches of life.

Born in the years around WWII, none of the 30 registrants for Rochester's first senior speed dating event dreamed of being flung into the high-tech social scene of the next millennium. But now, as posters go up, local media buzzes and anticipation grows, these typically-overlooked elders are spurred to confront the realities of physical appearance, intimacy and loneliness, a chance for growth and new beginnings.

An 81-year-old bodybuilding champ, divorced since his fifties, imagines someone new by his side; a skydiving widow dulls her loss by pursuing younger men; a grandmother and online-dating addict searches the web for Mr. Right; a romantic 79-year-old discards his portable oxygen for a sunset tango on the beach; a 1940s movie fanatic who escaped an abusive marriage still seeks her 'Fred and Ginger' romance.

Faced with feelings "even our own kids never ask about," each dater's fearless and candid confessions blend with preparations for the big day, a rush of five-minute encounters and then the anxious anticipation of receiving their results. Then, as new couples set off on first dates, the film exposes the wide range of intense and complex feelings that still lurk behind deepening wrinkles and thinning hair.

Playful and revealing, wise and inspiring, the speed daters both engage and enlighten with a candor that puts media stereotypes to shame. Just as we're all destined to age, and the aged were all once young, we suddenly come to realize just how much, and how little, our hearts change over a lifetime.

The film takes viewers where no documentary has gone before – into the emotional lives of older singles who still yearn to be seen and understood, to feel the comfort of another's warmth and touch, and who may still be open to a new chance at love.

WISDOM FROM THE AGE OF LOVE'S SENIOR SPEED DATERS

“Let's face it, when you're 25, jeez, you can throw yourself on the stairwell and do it. Now...it would hurt my back.” – Addie

“I got so much love to give to some woman, and it's just sitting there getting stale. I still have that excitement, that feeling in my heart.” – Fran

“At this age, beauty is different. It's not about wrinkles and plastic surgery, it's about being open and adventurous.” – Frank

“My arms are wrinkled and flabby. Do I want them to be? No, but this is who I am, and I think it's better just to be me.” – Linda

“In my generation, it was simple to ask a girl out. Now you have manuals, websites and therapists, but relationships don't seem any better.” – Phil

“People still look for intimacy. I'll admit it right out. I don't mean to be obnoxious about it or anything, but yeah, that's part of life.” – Matt

“I don't think the feeling of love changes over time. It remains just as challenging and intense as when you were younger.” – Nancy

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

While the world's fastest-growing age group is 65 and over, when we consider love and desire, our youth-obsessed media still embrace the clichés. Rarely in modern cultures are older adults given voice as emotionally intricate individuals.

My desire to explore this issue began when my dad's death ended an intense half-century love affair, leaving my still-vibrant mother struggling to face a new life alone. That same year, my 78-year-old uncle, who'd never married or even dated, met an 80-year-old woman, and they fell madly in love, like teenagers, behind the locked bedroom door. Trying to understand the needs of those closest to me, I searched for stories where seniors spoke openly about their intimate, emotional lives, but found very few.

And so, when a 'healthy aging' coalition in Rochester, NY announced a speed dating event exclusively for 70- to 90-year-olds (at which many chuckled), it struck me as both iconoclastic and obvious. Here was a unique chance to discover how age affects our desire to start over, to be held once again in someone's arms, to seek new companionship and affection. And so I set out with one question: Do decades of life and loss constrict our hearts, or might time develop them in unexpected ways?

Unlike other recent documentaries on aging, I saw an opportunity to break social and generational barriers by looking at older adults not in terms of specific talents or communities, but through shared, human desires. By telling a story involving a universal quest, I could connect them directly to the mainstream through situations to which all can relate. Regardless of age, I thought, who doesn't understand loneliness, or intimacy, or the search for love?

Gaining exclusive rights to the dating event and its participants, I filmed without a crew, aiming to develop easygoing, personal relationships with the speed daters, to follow their everyday routines and allow candid stories to emerge. I listened both for humor and confessional poignance, and discovered a wide-ranging narrative told through an ensemble of voices. In the end, I was amazed by how this group of conventional 70- to 90-year-olds, from the generation before baby boomers, opened up so willingly.

By attracting a wide audience with the humorous premise of 'grandparents going speed dating', THE AGE OF LOVE becomes provocative entertainment that also addresses many societies' most insidious misconception of aging – that the emotional needs of all older adults are similar and self-evident, focused on health and financial concerns and largely unrelated to those of younger generations.

On the contrary, as we watch these seniors navigate the comedy and drama of dating, their actions and emotions combine into something much deeper – revealing how the desire to love and be loved not only connects hearts of young and old, but, more unexpectedly, remains just as confounding, nerve-wracking and rewarding at any stage in life.

We're all destined to age, and the aged were all once young. As an unmarried filmmaker somewhere in the middle, this project represents, in many ways, my own journey to understanding love and relationships. The key for me and, hopefully, for all audiences, is that this story lets us meet characters we thought we knew, but in their own space and in their own words, without assumption or judgment – introducing new voices to mainstream media that cannot be easily categorized or ignored.
